This walk (and associated pamphlet co-authored by Thia Paternoster, a local horticulturist, and tree expert Ed Richardson) was designed by Glastonbury Partners in Planting (GPIP) to be a self-guided walking tour of trees from Glastonbury Center to Hubbard Street including Hubbard Green. GPIP's mission is to establish planting areas in historically significant or highly visible sites within Glastonbury, to provide educational opportunities for members of the community to learn about the care of plants, and to promote an understanding of the value of biodiversity among the flora (Source: "Trees of Interest on Main Street in Glastonbury's Historic District" published by GPIP, by Ed Richardson and Thia Paternoster).

For those who are interested, a second loop northbound to the fountain green and back will complete the hike as outlined in the pamphlet.
